Landfill fire 'getting expensive

BELLE GLADE - With city

million gallons of water a day onto it, a fire smoldering at the city landfill since Nov. 2 'is getting expensive' Public Works Director Ron Sigmon said Monday night.
Sigmon said be had no idea what the cost to the city has been so far but he remembered estimating Saturday that the fire had cost more than $5,000 to combat.

He said the city had been renting an eight inch hydraulic pump for sever-al days to put water on the fire and last Thurday, United States Sugar had loaned the city two "Rainbirds" to add their water to the volumen aiready being provided. City Fire Chief A.E. "Pete" Webb said one of the rainbirds had broken down temporarily over the weekend but both were again in operation Wednesday morning after city forces broke up the landfill to some extent Tuesday with a buildozer. Sigmon said it is believed the fire began when some Cubans, who have been sneaking into the area to camp at night in

All of us make little mistakes now and then and occassionally we make a huge blunder, but usually these human errogs are soon forgotten by our friends, and in many instances, by our enemies. Not so in the business world.

When a corporation makes a blunder it is there for all the world to see, for competitors to take advantage of for years to come. In fact some of these corporate blunders will never be forgotten.

Ohio State University International Business Program Chairman David Ricks has, for the last ten years, spent his time ferreting out blunders made by the big businesses and advertising campaigns that backfired in one form or another.

Through the use of ingenious devices and much skullduggery, the Herald-Observer has obtained some of these blunders the corporations would rather

He went on to say that part of the problem is that, although he and Sanders have been close friends for a number of years, he angered Sanders recently when Sanders telephoned him to verify the fact of former Public Utilities Director Kenneth Retterer's resignation. During the discussion Monday night, Baker informed the commissioners he understood from the evidence he had at the time, which included the bill, that at least five laws had been violated, including forgery, which is a third degree, felony.

Mayor Altman and Commissioners Claude Tindail and Charles Goodlett agreed they didn't want, at that time, to turn the evidence over to criminal court.

"What's an LMD." Dr. Larson saked. "That's a Large Mahogany Desk."
The city commission started looking for a new city manager *he first part of September, shortly after Robert Sanders resigned the post to move to Key West.
Advertisements placed in the ICMA Journal set a deadline for applications of Oct. 9 but this was the first chance the commissioners have had to meet and discuss the selection. Dr. Larson began the discussion be telling the commissioners he had not only taught college level courses in state and local government, he has been in on the writing of charters for seven cities in the state and was, a few months ago, chairman of a citizens committee to choose a new city manager for the City of Boca Raton.

A number of the parameters in the profile agreed upon by the commissioners, after Larson left, were specifically suggested by him, including the admonition to be wary of retired military officers and corporate executives. "We had our application," he said of the Boca Raton experience, "from the recently retired vice president in charge of future design at the Chrysler Corporation. It didn't take much for us to eliminate him.

Larson also suggested, and the commissioners stressed during later discussion that no one of the guidelines stipulated in the profile could or should be a reason to exclude anyone.

There is the possibility for instance, that a successful applicant would have no college education at all but would have enough on-the-job experience to outweigh the educational requirement.

Decisions made on Saturday afternoon

Being a University of South Florida alumni and hence a USF sports fan, I begrudgingly switched on the Florida-Georgia football game Saturday. I would have rather watched USF football, but USF doesn't have a football team. Too bad, because I might have been a bruising 30-year-old, 160-pound All American full-back when I attended school several years ago. school several years ago. Don't let the spectacles fool you. A man has got to his dreams.

Anyway, I tuned into the game being played in beautiful downtown Jack sonville, fully expecting to see Florida blown out of see Florida blov the Gator Bowl.

Sure enough, there was lerschel Walker running

Sure enough, there was Herschel Walker running for a 72-yard TD before all my vacuum tabes could get warmed up.

Just when I was ready to give up and go outside to do something more exciting, like weeding around the hibiscuese, Florida had to go and get back into the game, kickback into the game, kick ing a field goal.

here I was -- suspended between the game and the back yard most of the the back yard most of the afternoon. Whenever Florida seemed down and out, the Gators would draw closer.

Gator teams are sup-posed to belly-up in the water when confronted with a top 10 team -- spe-cifically Gator teams with freshman quarterbacks.

Well, there was something about this year's Georgia team that stirred up the best in the Gators. In the last quarter, Florida went ahead by a point, and Florida fans every-where pinched themselves

Sure enough, Georgia Sure enough, Georgia being the better team, scored on a 93-yard touchdown pass with about 1½ minutes left in the game. Since the polls said the Bulldogs were number two in the country, I'm sure there was no luck—

Election disappointment

Democrats of national stature were sent home, and Republicans, who were perceived as being more tight-fisted and likely to restore the country's economy to good health were elected. This message seemed to be echoed in Hendry Country where voters rejected a one-cent gas tax which could have been used to build and maintain roads.

It is not surpising that this proposal was rejected, oven though a one cent gas hike seems to be the least of our inflation worries, especially in view of the tripling of gasoline prices in leas than a decade.

What is surprising, however, is the rejection by Pioneer Plantation voters of a proposal to establish a drainage district. Rather than enjoying majority support, the proposal was overwhelmingly defeated.

The rejection of a drainage district at Pioneer Plantation is all the more surprising because many residents of that community asked for it following flooding which crept up Le the door steps of some houses and made automobile transportation to some houses and made automobile transportation to some homesteads impossible for several days.

Following the flooding, elected county officials made on the site visits to the area. The only possible solution to the repeated flooding of Pioneer seemed to be in establishing a drainage district.

This area's legislative legation was contacted and a special act approved in Tallahassee to set up the special taxing district.

In the meantime

In the meantime, county commissioners assisted the project by retaining a leading West Palm Boach drainage attorneys to guide the district to its birth.

But Tuesdan, the voters of Pioneer Plantation went to the polls, and the result was that the district.

**Hilbert**:

vill be is anyone's guess. But it is reasonable to assume that Pioneer will again face heavy rains and flooding.

County commissioners have steadfastly refused, and rightly so, to enter drainage matters for any area. Independent drainage districts have been established in the county. Residents of each district pay for the improvements which directly benefit them. Had Ploneer approved a drainage district, it too could have begun the improvements necessary to sustain a desirable quality of life within the community. The failure of the referendum must be one of the major disappointments of the year for the people who worked so hard to bring it to pass.

Well, it seems servicemen serving on military bases and posts around the world aren't being paid off in dollar bills anymore. Susan B. Anthony has replaced George Washington.
There wouldn't be anything wrong with that if Susan B. would buy as much as George but, despite the best wishes of the feminists, Ms. Anthony just doesn't carry the clout of George.

The memorial will make no political statement about the war. Rather it is intended to be a symbol of national unity, of reconciliation. It will be located near the Lincoln Memorial, also a symbol of reconciliation after a design.

Thoughts on the massive voter turnout

There was a 74 percent turnout in Hendry County for the November 4 general election. That was more than this county has had to handle in a long time, and it showed in the long lines at most voting places. From the grapevine at the Hendry County Courthouse, I hear that almost every line was as long as the one I stood in Tuenday. od in Tu vote, very badly. But what do you do when you have to spend two hours in a line?

I'll tell you, I didn't have a darn thing to do, but I did listen and watch, and here are some observations of what people do in lines.

I got to the polling pice around 5 p.m. that day. When I had one lines from the first him to the polling pice around 5 p.m. that day. When I had one lives from the front of the line, or man head to be seen I was from the front of the line, or a line of the lines of t wait. It was like standing around at a party, I suppose, but they just didn't seem to care that they were standing out in a parking lot.

A group of older men and women behind me were also talking and laughing, talking about everything from the presidential election to their families. One man noted that at the last presidential election, the winner had been named over the television and radio stations before he had even gotten to a voting booth, I don't think anyone who heard that statement was too hanny.

I don't think anyone who neard that statement was too happy.
Around 6 p.m., someone from behind me quite a ways in the line, drove his car over to the side of the line and turned on the radio. Maybe nobody but myself appreciated this gesture, because soon the man turned off the radio because it was too noisy to hear

Even after it got dark, people kept coming, and very few left. One person noted that it took about ten minutes from the time someone disappeared into the building to vote to the time they reappeared to search for their cars smiling. Another voice said that there should be classes in the line to teach people how to use the finicky voting machines so it wouldn't take so long for people to vote—and so the people in line wouldn't have to wait so long.

Though more people kept coming, right up to 7 p.m., nobody left the line in disgust.

By the time I had almost reached the front of the line, a man a little way back shouted to a friend just at the door to the building, saying. "I'll give you a dollar for your place!" The guy by the door shouted back, "Man, I wouldn't take 10 for it!"

There was a general air of expectation and excitament in that line. And when I finally came out of the building, having fought with the voting machine, I breathed a sigh of relief and was amazed to look up and find that the line I had taken two hours to go through was even longer than, when I had entered it. It was 7 p.m., and no more people would be allowed to enter the line. But Hendry County had a 74 percent turnout. Wow. On a different not, don't let anyone tell you that football isn't a rough sport. You guessed it. I got schmucked last Friday, right there for everyone to see!

seef. I have to thank everyone who came over to me to see if I was all right. I was fine, and my camera was soon put back together and also worked fine. But I was just plain chicken. I didn't have the courage to step back on that field. Maybe it had to do with something one concerned woman had told me. She said something like now I was a real citizen of LaBelle. Well, perhaps I took that to mean that every football game I attend brings me closer to becoming a permanent revident of this town!

What I thought was so interesting was that of the five, only one failed to pass and it wasn't the one with the most opposition.

FAR WAX EXCESS

EAR WAX EXCESS

Many people associate excessive amounts of ear wax with "goor highers". Consequently, they often may poke around in their ears with hair pins, caston appeal applicators, and other pointed abjects in an attempt to remove what looks like defer from their ears. Ear wax, however, is anything but defer. The yellow to deep omber colored material is actually a protective conling for the ear cone.

Removed of ear wax with pointed instruments is done process for all tests the reasons. First, even coreflut individuals may place the instrument too for into the ear and thus damage the ear drum. This can result in extreme pain and even hearing loss. Second, when wax is removed from the ear conal, the tender surface or the candid is scratched. This scratching, no matter how gentle, can lead to both inflormation and infection of the outer ear.

The expert physician may remove ear wax with a point instrument when examining the err. For home remoil of structhed, the scratching opens in many products is giverein and is available without the prescription of a physician.

Ear wax is normal and helpful. When excessive wax is greasent, a offereining agent, is much preferred over dangerous cotton tipped applicators, hair pins, and similar objects.

TAKING IT FROM THE TOP

By REV. DRIVID T. EVANS Everglades Presbyterian Church

During the last two elections there has been a tendency to take aim against big government. During the last decade there has been a quiet revolution against the mainline churches. People have been going to the more conservative churches or not going at all. Many people have just become passive about organized religion. This passivess has been turned against God because in the minds of many God has been replaced.

organized religion. This passivness has been turned against God because in the minds of many God has been replaced.

All of this points to a kind of rebellion that is going on in America. There have been various forms of rebellion throughout the history of mankind. Much of this desire or compulsion to oppose comes from a lack of internal peace.

The unpeaceful condition of man is caused by the rebellious relationship with God which in turn cause an uproar within self and hostility toward others.

The Apostel Paul wrote to the Corinthians "God was in Christ reconciling the world to Himself, no longer holding men's misdeed against them and He has entrusted us with the message of reconciliation." God has in Jesus Christ provided for the bringing of people, the world, you and me back into a peaceful relationship. Through Christ our sins are no longer counted against us, and to complete the circle we have been given the tank of spreading the message and attitude of God to others.

In reality each of us has been entrusted with the work or the ministry of reconciliation. Each Christian has been reconciled through Christ's Grejving love and act and therefore is appointed an ambassador for Christ.

The point is that we are given forgiveness, for our sins are paid for by Christ. By this redeeming act we

The ACE program, according to Feld and the alide presentation, differs from the traditional public school concept in several ways.

One of the greatest dif-ferences is that each stu-dent studies at his or her own rate of speed and each student has a carrell in the "learning center," with communications cut off to anybody but the inations cut off to anybody but has structors.

The presentation noted that in "normal" schools, students travel through their school years along with their class and if they don't learn the material, they' re socially promoted.

"We finished our first quarter last week," Feld said, "and we'll be sending out progress reports next week (this week). The average grade for the 90 students is 30 percent. throughout the nation can succeed.

Feld said the program also enhances the togetherness of the family unit by hiring men and women teachers who work in teams, obviously in 'father and mother roles.'

"We're watching the breakdown of the family in America,' Feld told the Rotarians. 'One indication is the rise of juvenile delinquency.' He said he believes, also, that the breakdown is no accident, that it's the result of a de-liberate effort. He said he believes a Christian education is the answer to that breakdown. Feld said the plans for the school call for 34,000 square feet of floor space, which will include a circu-lar learning center with upstairs classrooms for junior college level courses, a cafetorium, a swim-ming pool and other facili-ties.

Buying a used boat

Last week we dealt with what to look for when purchasing a new boat. This week we will deal with used or pre-owned boats. Many of the things one looks for in buying a new boat apply when looking at used boats. The difference is that by the time you look at a used boat, original faults are more obvious. The real trick in buying real value for your money in a used boat is to check out points that are not so obvious. Where has the boat been stored? Covered and enclosed storage is best. If stored exposed, look for signs of expanded seams, splits at fastenings, braces and joints. Check carefully for rust and corrosion, including the power plant.

Has the boat been used in fresh or saltwater, or both. If in salt, look for electrolysis damage to metal hulls and all exterior metal parts, including rivets and screws. Since most used boats already-have a power plant check out the lower unit for corrosion and also electrolysis. A general rule is that boats that have been used in fresh water only sell for 20 to 30 percent more than those used in the salt. This is a dread allment that can afflict an otherwise sound hull. It is an unwanted cure, usually concave, in the bottom centerline of the boat resulting from improper support during storage. Using the wrong trailer is one of the more probable causes of this. In buying a small boat that has been in storage for a great length of time look for one that has been stored bottom up and covered.

Check out the condition of hull fastenings and hard-little or no maintenance. We cannot emphasize enough the importance of carefully checking the transom. Original construction weakness and careless or stressful use will show up immediately. Ensure that the joints with the sides and the bottom are sound. If there are signs of cracking, splits and separation you may want to think twice before purchasing such a boat. Where transom pads are used make sure a deteriorated one can be

Look for pitted surfaces on an aluminum hull. Their presence indicates eltrolysis. Don't buy that boat. On the other hand amail dents or a few broken rivets means little. Dente can be knocked out and a few rivets restored. Beware of loose rivets all over. They just cannot be effectively repaired. The holes are generally too wide for re-riveting.

Crazing on the surface of a fiberglass boat's gel coat may tell its age but has little or no effect on the quality of the hull. The use of a good quality fiberglass restorer and some old fashioned elbow grease will do wonders for this particular condition. Cracks.

Don't pass up a used boat just because it has a hole punched in it. If no additional damage is present and the hull is in otherwise good condition, a simple hole, even a large one, might easily be repaired. This may result in a real bargain to you. ## Area fishing report

By Lorne Raciost
This past week has seen some nice days and some days that made fishing somewhat difficult, due mostly to high winds from mostly to high winds from the north and northeast. When conditions permitted, the peppergrass beds drew the most attention from anglers seeding bass. These particular areas produced a good many fish and of better than average size.

When the winds wouldn't cooperate bass lishermen hugged the lake edges, especially those having needle grass growth. The Rim Canal also has good numbers of small bass, particuarly in the Clewiston area. Many of the Canal areas where the fish are holding makes fee some pretty tight, accurate casting. Even then you will be making the odd foray shoreward to disentangle your lure from a snag or rock because you cast four inches too far. The West side of the lake finds the bass using the bydrills bass using the bydrilla cover where, though difficult to fish, live shiners are producing good fish in good num-bers. On the East side, bers. On the East side, conditions permitting, the grass beds have been the best bet. Catches of Black Crappie (speckled perch) are becoming more frequent. They are running to great give and are in to good size and are in excellent condition. Live Missouri minnows and lead head jigs have been most productive. Except for the Clewis

He also advised that while plastic worms are the standby some good catches of bass have been made on spoon and skirt or strip combos recently. recently.

Live shiners are also doing their thing for those who prefer this method. He tells us that the larger base appear to be holding in the grass beds, generally speaking. Dut some of the larger models are also being taken on the lake edges. Specks are active in the fallen free tops in the Rim Canal where Missouri minows have been the best bait. Glen Hunter of Twin Palms of Lakeport says live wild shiners are producing more and larger fish than anything else. For example Tom Collins of Venice, Fls. had bass to ten pounds as did Wally Aspendahl of Massachusetts. Also, the Forsbach brothers of Lake Placid had a limit to seven pounds.
